Lindsey Albracht is a doctoral candidate in English at the CUNY Graduate Center who specializes in writing studies, multilingual student writing, non-traditional assessment methods, faculty development, and Blogs@Baruch support. She is writing her dissertation on community-engaged approaches to translingual faculty development. As both a Digital Pedagogy Specialist here at the CTL and as a Teaching and Learning Fellow at Macaulay Honors College, she assists faculty in designing classrooms which support the integration of technology, writing, and project-based learning. She also works as a Writing Consultant at the Columbia School of Social Work Writing Center. She has taught first-year composition, English as a Second Language, Introduction to Literary Studies, and Public Writing inside and outside of the CUNY system. Lindsey also co-designed Baruch's Hybrid Seminar, the Active Learning Strategies repository, and the Active Learning Summer Seminar.
